

THE RESTAURANT REPORTER

| PHILADELPHIA |

"LACROIX AT THE RITTENHOUSE

is a major new player in Philly's upscale dining scene," says Craig LaBan, restaurant critic for The Philadelphia Inquirer. It marks the return of renowned chef Jean-Marie Lacroix, who was just one year into his retirement from the Four Seasons Hotel Philadelphia when he joined The Rittenhouse hotel. In his new venue, Lacroix serves an eclectic prix fixe menu with dishes like sautéed lamb chops with gnocchi and aged goat cheese. (210 West Rittenhouse Square; 215-790-2533)

BON APPÉTIT | FEBRUARY 2003